SIM's Graham and Debbie Frith moved to Santa Cruz, in the eastern lowlands of Bolivia, in mid-2008. Their dream is to establish a new 'El Alfarero' project in Santa Cruz close to the state university, which currently has over 50,000 students. 'El Alfarero' (The Potter) Student Centre is committed to reaching the university population for Christ by developing leaders from the local Evangelical church, who in turn will reach out to the students through the centre and disciple them into mature believers. The new student centre will be at least twice the size of the existing project in Sucre and will meet the needs of even more Bolivian students.

Graham visited Santa Cruz recently looking for suitable land for the ministry. 'We had pre-planned ideas about possible plots and areas, but God had other ideas. All those possibilities closed, but he opened another that we hadn't even considered.' Graham said.

'We found a plot for sale on the other side of the campus. It is the right size, and there is a small entrance to the campus from that side only 50 feet from this property. It backs on to the campus property, and so we could open an access to the cafe direct from the campus. We are very excited about the prospect, even though there is nothing definite yet.'

Meeting Students' Needs

'El Alfarero' is committed to providing holistic mission through meeting the students' needs:

- economically - providing inexpensive and nutritious food through the cafe
- socially - by providing a place each weekday night to meet friends and have fun without the influence of alcohol, drugs or smoking
- emotionally - by caring for the students and offering free Bible-based counselling and pregnancy crisis counselling
- spiritually - by introducing them to Christ, helping them through discipleship to mature as believers and to form part of the local Evangelical church

The original 'El Alfarero' has been serving university students in Sucre, Bolivia, since 2001. The day-to-day running of 'El Alfarero' in Sucre was handed over to a Bolivian leadership team at the beginning of 2007.

Get Involved

Pray

for wisdom to make the dream of 'El Alfarero' in Santa Cruz a reality for God to prepare the students' hearts who will visit 'El Alfarero' in Santa Cruz for God to continue His work in the many lives already transformed in Sucre through the ministry at 'El Alfarero'
